CO-EDITION

mediaXXI | Formalpress develops a wide activity in publishing and co-publishing of scientific books, in partnership with several international professionals and institutions, specially universities, from different places. In that sense, and following the launch of this service provided by mediaxxi, we would like to place our experience at your disposal for an eventual publication of a book (edited by you or by the academic institution to which it belongs), which includes the design, pagination, image edition, proofreading, printing, book marketing and distribution, through an affordable investment.

For that purpose, and as an indication, we point out some conditions that include all the aforementioned activities, in a turnkey system: proofreading, editing, design, layout, printing, distribution and marketing.

In this context, it's also important to highlight the fact that Media XXI has various partnerships, for example with Amazon and Barnes & Noble (among more than 100 international bookshops spread over several continents, where books can be purchased in their printed or digital versions) for the sale and promotion of books, which automatically ensures their placement on Amazon, giving high visibility to authors at an international level.

By providing these services of editorial support, we can contribute to the production, sharing and dissemination of scientific knowledge in an international context. Moreover, beyond the intellectual achievement and satisfaction it brings, editing a book is also a good investment and a great way to enhance the personal or institutional prestige, and it may even generate new job opportunities.

Therefore, Media XXI has strong skills that we put at your service, including a network of international translators and proofreaders, specialized in media and communication sciences that collaborate in the editing and translation process. We also provide a print-on-demand service, as well as author editions and custom publishing, including, if requested, the gathering, selection and
